

The Unending

The Unending, a 4-piece metal band hailing from Kelowna, British Columbia, is well known for their high-octane energy and intricate blend of aggression and melodic elements. The inspiration for their sound draws from different aspects of melodic death metal, while incorporating infusions of modern metalcore, atmospheric black metal, and the roots of their classic thrash metal influences, creating a powerful and dynamic style that sets them apart in the Canadian metal scene.

Originally founded by Tyler Thompson (Guitar, Lead Vocals), the band has evolved over the years into a tightly knit lineup that includes Chase Hofferd (Guitar, Vocals), Jon Hintz (Bass, Vocals), and Connor Bartley (Drums). Together, they create a sound fueled by rapid, technical guitar riffs and punishing drums, with thundering bass tones seamlessly intertwined with the other instruments, including the aggressive and heart wrenching vocal deliveries.

One of the band's standout tracks, "Ethereal", exemplifies The Unending's ability to blur the lines of multiple genres and styles, while staying true to their sound and their mission. Themes of personal struggle, societal reflection, resilience, and awakening to one's own purpose are at the heart of the band's message, which resonate deeply with fans who appreciate both musical complexity and emotional depth.

Since releasing their first singles in 2020 such as "Bring the Hammer Down", and "Phantoms", The Unending has garnered attention for their electrifying live performances, where their intense sound and technical proficiency shine through. With a growing fanbase and a reputation for delivering captivating, memorable experiences, they will stop at nothing to bring the most entertaining show possible and strive to deeply connect with their audiences and leave everything on the stage each and every night.

With their first studio album in the works, their ever-evolving sound, and a strong cohesive lineup, The Unending is well on their way to expanding their reach across Canada and beyond, solidifying their place in the modern metal landscape. You can find their recordings on all streaming platforms.
